

The thermal store has a heat exchange inside, at the top and another at the bottom with a baffle in between to give temperature stratification. which is connected to mains water - thus DHW is mains pressure when you run it, flow is detected, and it runs boiler primaries pump to 'stir' the store and keep hot water passing over the heat exchanger.

